COSY UP

14.01.22

While the winter winds howl outside and temperatures continue to drop, many New Yorkers are seeking refuge indoors and at home. With that in mind, Abode2 takes a look at some of New York City's towers that feature the warmest and most inviting amenity spaces. Enter beautiful wood-panelled rooms. Warm and inviting, there's something about luxuriously wood-panelled rooms that instantly make one feel cosy and comfortable.

Sleek and sumptuous in its finish, wood panelling is also a stunning design statement. With all of the cachet of a cosy cabin, these exceptional buildings also include expansive space for indoor weather activities whether it be a glass of wine by the fire or a card game. Check out some of the most luxurious examples below:

200 East 83rd

The new Upper East Side residential tower by Robert A.M. Stern Architects with interiors by Rottet Studio, features multiple amenities spaces with wood panelling. Overlooking the 17th-floor pool room and Winter Garden, the light-filled state-of-the-art fitness centre and yoga studio feel fresh and timeless with custom white oak millwork panels lining the walls. 200 East 83rd's custom millwork library on the ground floor offers direct access to a serene landscaped garden and features beautiful custom white oak shelving wrapped in leather panels, creating a warm and inviting environment for residents to sit by the bespoke fireplace and unwind with a good book. In the private cinema, a striking wood-panelled ceiling draws the eye upward while providing a moody and sophisticated ambiance.
